FIELD VISIT TO BARKUR AND MEKKEKATTU

Date: 28.01.2022

A Report

Students of Department of History visited Barkur, A Historical Site. On : 28.01.2022 under the guidance of Dr. Jayaram Shettigar and Mrs. Reshma 25 students participated in the programme.

Bairagi Ganapathi Temple, Chowlikeri: Bairagi Ganapathi Temple, Chowlikeri, is an elaborate one when compared to others, in that, it is much bigger and has not deteriorated with time. It is believed to have been built by the Cholas and is 900 years old. The idol is said to have been installed by a bairagi(tramp) and hence the name. The temple has some beautiful stone pillars reflecting the architecture of the past and also houses multiple terracotta tiled enclosures. After having some paan* at the small shop opposite to this pond, we visited the Chaulikeri Ganapathy temple nearly opposite to the pond. This ~900 year old temple has very interesting slanted stone roofing. This temple is functional even today. *Paan is a something which is chewed and consumed prepared with betel leaf and areca-nut with some chuuna (slaked lime). There are many varieties and flavours of paan, some of which include tobacco.

Kattale Basadi:

Group of Temples Enquiring the locals, we came to the place with the old temple with a sign board of Kattale Basadi, literally meaning the Dark Temple. A Jain Temple is also called as a Basadi. We entered the temple group, with the Kattale Jain Basadi in the front, and two Hindu shrines behind it, one a Shiva temple and another a Vaishnava temple. There is a small Nandi carved out of granite, before the Shiva temple. Nandi is the guardian deity of Kailasa, Lord Shiva's abode. These are declared as National Monuments by the Archaeological Survey of India. These monuments are dated to sometime around 12th century CE, according to the Archaeological Survey of India. All three temples are in a walled compound built around it for its protection, along with some other structures inside, and a 20 feet monolithic stone pillar at the entrance. These temples are not architecturally very ornate and have minimal carvings, designs or ornamentations on the stones. The exterior walls are mostly plain with minimal carvings. But they are of historical significance as Barkur was an ancient city, and was the ancient capital of the Tulu kingdom.

Nandikeshwara temple Mekkekattu: Mekkekattu is a small village in Udupi district of Karnataka. It has a temple of Nandikeshwara. Revisited the temple again in 2020 and here's a quick post on why you should consider visiting Mekkekattu Nandikeshwara temple in Udupi district. What makes this temple special is the presence of large dolls, few as high as 10-12 feet. Dolls represent various characters-warrior, king, women, animals and vary in sizes. Mekkekattu can be reached by Road from nearby towns like Mangalore/Udupi/Kundapura. Typical route will be- Mangaluru-Udupi-Brahmavara-Barkuru-Shiriyara (Buses that go towards Haladi from Brahmavara can drop you off at this place). Alternatively you can connect from Kundapura town either via Bidkalkatte or Saybarakatte (these are names of local villages- don't worry if you're not planning to visit) Not much information is available about these dolls. These structures/statues/dolls mostly appear to be in war ready state and have a mix of multiple cultures. They appear to be built on movable structures. Not sure if they'll be taken out in a procession or something during festival/fairs. Would have been nice if temple management can display them neatly with some display showcasing their name, story etc. Right now they are all stuffed into a room. There are "Photography is Prohibited" board inside the temple but you can request the priest for permission.

Kallu Ganapathi temple-Kallu Ganapathi or Stone

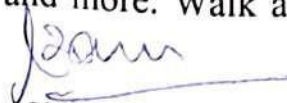

Ganapathi is a small temple located in the centre of several large boulders. The temple is small but the presence of large boulders, a river and scenic view makes this temple a special attraction in Udupi district. Kallu Ganapathi temple is located some 30 kms from Udupi city near Saibrakatte. Thanks to Subramanya SM for tip off about Kallu Ganapathi temple. Scenic view: Rock near Kallu Ganapathi offers scenic view of paddy fields and a river. Refer photos in this post and watch the video. I didn't get the best picture due to cloudy weather- will visit gain some other day later. Huge boulders: Naturally formed huge boulders are an attraction worth exploring. They are concentrated on a small area, easy to explore and are left untouched mainly because of temple. Else someone would have blasted these rocks and sold them as building material. While boulders were here since thousands of years, Kallu Ganapathi temple is said to be built over 500 years ago under the sponsorship of King of Barkuru, Shri Bhootala Pandya. It is a small temple without anything visually attractive but the campus in which temple is located is worth visiting. You can walk around the paddy fields in the area and enjoy the nature for a while. There are lots of paddy fields, a bridge across the river (one visible from top of the temple boulder) and more. Walk around and enjoy the nature.
